Promoting intra-regional trade, addressing the challenge of climate change, industrialization, value addition and peace and security formed the key talking points of the leaders that spoke at 22nd Summit of the COMESA Heads of State and Government conducted in Lusaka, Zambia, on 8 June 2023.

President Hakainde Hichilema of Zambia who will now lead the regional bloc after taking over the chair from President Abdel Fattah El Sisi of Egypt indicated that these were pressing issues for the region and would remain in his focus.

“We have a mammoth task ahead to take stock of where we are and define growth paths that are resilient to exogenous forces,” he said noting that many of the countries in the region are saddled with a high debt burden, unemployment and economic stagnation.

He observed that slowed growth rates and food insecurity affect many parts of the region. He attributed this to the effects of climate change, the Covid-19 pandemic, and political instability caused by conflict situations.

“It is therefore incumbent upon ourselves to combine our resources to promote trade and investment that will support sustainable growth and create jobs,” he added.

In his address as the outgoing chair, President El Sisi appreciated the commitment of Member States to achieve full integration as witnessed by the steady focus that has been maintained through his tenure. “Notwithstanding the challenges that our countries have faced in the recent period, our integration agenda has remained on course,” he said.

He highlighted some of the programmes whose implementation have remained on course. They include the implementation of trade facilitation instruments such as digitization of customs clearances, removal of Non-Tariff Barriers and support to small scale traders and empowerment of vulnerable groups-women, youth and disabled people.

He said industrialization through the COMESA industrialization strategy remains at the core of the integration agenda and central to the diversification of the regional economic growth.

President William Ruto of Kenya observed that the entire world is experiencing intertwined economic, geopolitical and climatic crises which have exerted enormous adverse impacts on the continent and COMESA region. He said the promotion of green investment to power a zero-carbon global industrial order is a priority.

“Through robust policy, we have taken positive measures to construct an investment climate that attracts high quality global capital to our economy, and to promote a business environment that encourages value addition and secondary manufacturing,” he added.

President Lazarus Chakwera of Malawi stressed the need for Member States to move with speed on the key pillars of economic integration including working together to increase productive capacities in key sectors such as agriculture, tourism, and mining.

The theme of this year’s Summit is “Economic integration for a thriving COMESA, anchored on green investment, value addition and tourism.”

Secretary General of COMESA, Chileshe Kapwepwe described this theme as most appropriate to address the key concerns after a period of turbulence caused by Covid-19 pandemic, conflict in Europe and effects of climate change.

The next Summit will be hosted by Burundi whose Head of State, President Evariste Ndayishimiye attended the Summit and took over as the Vice Chair of the COMESA Authority.
The recent COMESA Summit presented an opportunity for the COMESA Secretariat to brief the Heads of State on the state of integration and the milestones that have been covered this far.

In a state of integration report, Secretary General Chileshe Kapwepwe detailed the key developments and achievements in the past year focusing on the market integration and physical integration pillars.

Under trade liberalization which falls under market integration pillar, she noted that the membership to the COMESA Free Trade Area has remained at 16 States with the four countries the DR Congo, Eritrea, Eswatini and Somalia at different stages of full liberalisation.

“There was significant increase in COMESA’s trade globally and within the region above the pre-COVID-19 pandemic levels,” the SG said. “The value of COMESA’s total exports to the world significantly increased by 56% from US$ 100 billion in 2020 to US$ 156 billion in 2021. The sectors that contributed to this increase were manufactures, fuels, ores and metals and food.”

The value of Intra-COMESA total exports increased by 28% from US$ 10 billion in 2020 to US$ 13 billion in 2021. Key exports include palm oil, cement, copper ores and concentrates, beet/cane sugar, live animals and petroleum oils.

Among the largest exporting countries in the COMESA region, are Egypt, DR Congo, Tunisia, Seychelles, Uganda, Zimbabwe, Kenya and Zambia. They registered a combined increase of 41% in exported manufactured products in 2021 compared to 2020.

On the liberalization of Trade in Services, she highlighted the Secretariat’s continued support to negotiations in six priority areas in business, financial, transport, communications, tourism construction and energy services.

On trade facilitation, implementation of trade facilitation instruments to overcome barriers and accelerate intra-regional trade and investments has been strengthened with financial support from European Union, World Bank, African Development Bank, Afrexim Bank, and others.

On the Tripartite Free Trade Area, she said engagement with countries that have not ratified it has been ongoing. The goal is to get three more signatures to attain the required threshold of 14 countries to enable the agreement to enter in force. Currently a total of 26 signatures and 11 ratifications have been received.

In the efforts to strengthen democratic governance, inclusivity and promote peace and stability, she underlined COMESA’s continued support towards entrenching good governance which is the foundation of peace and security. Activities under this initiative included mounting election observer missions to Member States that have been conducting elections.

The report also highlighted some of the key challenges and constraints that have been experienced in the implementation of programmes. They include slow and delayed domestication of agreed protocols, proliferation of non-tariff barriers, low levels of value addition, slow harmonization/weak coordination of multiple integration arrangements, restrictions to free movement of persons, labour and services and technical and financial constraints.

Going forward, the Secretary General urged Member States to eradicate barriers to trade, free movement of people, strengthen connectivity and invest in clean technologies to achieve the desired intra-regional trade and sustainable economic development.
Ben Bella Road in Lusaka is the typical downtown city street characterized by traffic congestion, crowding and general disorder. Swirls of trash and dust and cacophony of noises from street vendors and public service vehicles rends the air all daylong and early evening. Calm and quiet prevails only when the sun sets, and night claims the space.

It is on this street that the Secretariat of COMESA, the largest economic community in Africa has had its permanent headquarters for decades. This location defies the general expectation of an international diplomatic mission, as these are commonly found in serene, orderly and upmarket environs.

For years, various initiatives to move COMESA HQs out this location have been made, but all have faced formidable headwinds. Could it be that its name: the Common Market has something to do with this destiny!

Way back in 2015, Zambian government allocated 10 acres of land to the headquarters project. Located about four kilometres from the Kenneth Kaunda International Airport this is an ideal location. But funding challenges to develop the facility has kept this project on hold.

Now there is light at the end of the mythical tunnel: a commitment from the highest authorities in the land.

In their final Communiqué issued at the end of the 22nd COMESA Heads of State and Authority, conducted in Lusaka, Zambia, the leaders acknowledged the need for construction of a new Headquarters. Hence, they called upon COMESA Secretariat to engage with the Host country and urged the Government of Zambia to lead and support the process.

The call by the leaders was timely, given that President Hakainde Hichilema of Zambia, is now the Chair of the COMESA Authority of Heads of State and Government. Besides, as he took over the mantle to lead the regional bloc, he stated clearly that a new home for the Secretariat will be a priority during his tenure as chair.

Now, the COMESA HQs project has acquired the critical ingredient to succeed: the political will at the highest level. It is no longer about if but when this long-awaited project will lift off the ground.

New Home for COMESA HQs is Now Within Sight

They also appreciate progress on Libya in getting back on track towards implementing components of the Ceasefire Agreement.

However, the Ministers expressed concern with the recently witnessed deadly escalation of fighting in Sudan where intense fighting was raging causing death and displacement of many and destruction of key infrastructure.

During the meeting which was opened by Zambia Vice President Mrs Mutale Nalumango and attended by 18 of the 21 Member States of the regional bloc, the Ministers noted the resurgence and escalation of activities of the M23 Movement in the Great Lakes region. This was also discussed as an area of concern that needs more to be done to resolve the issues.

In her statement, the Vice President commended the Ministers for allocating time to discuss issues of regional democracy, peace and security. She noted that no meaningful integration and sustainable development can be realized in the absence of peace.

"While Africa, and COMESA in particular is making strides in shaping a continent beaming with tremendous progress towards peace and restoration of power to civilian governments, the conflict in Sudan, is indeed regrettable," she added. "Therefore, it is in COMESA’s interest to ensure that peace prevails at all times because instability anywhere on the continent is instability everywhere."

The Ministers also reviewed the programmes under the Governance, Peace and Security Unit of the Secretariat and commended efforts to address root causes of conflict and recognising the impact of climate change on peace and security dynamics.

They appreciated the peaceful conduct of elections in the region and called for the review of electoral processes to draw lessons and provide recommendations to consolidate democracy across the region are some of the positive strides.

COMESA Secretary General Chileshe Kapwepwe outlined some of the key programmes being implemented such as the silencing of the guns, enhancing youth participation in governance, support to Member States to strengthen their anti-money laundering efforts and the robust early warning system (COMWARN).

"The positives recorded in the region gives us more incentive to reinvigorate our collective determination to address the issues of conflicts and insecurity in our region because these inevitably accentuates the effects of such global threats," she said.
